Stanza from 'America' Called Prayer

Compromise By Rabbi, Priest Rejected In Jewish Council

LAWRENCE, Long Island (P-O)—The compromise worked out between a rabbi and a priest to avert a protest against prayer reading in the schools here hasn't solved the problem.

The compromise would have substituted the reading of the fourth stanza of "America" for the prayer.

The South Shore Jewish Community Council, which planned the protest, is not satisfied. Abraham H. Klugsberg, executive director of the local branch of the American Jewish Congress, took vigorous exception to the reading of a stanza from the song.

"Rabbi Goodman was speaking for himself only—and not for the South Shore Jewish Community Council, said Klugsberg." We wish to express emphatically our opposition to all prayers in public schools, whether they be called sectarian or non-sectarian. Prayer belongs in the home and in the houses of worship; it has no place in a public school. Of course, there can be no objection to the singing of 'America' or any other patriotic hymn in the public schools. Patriotic songs belong in the public schools just as prayers do not."

Susan Cabot's Real Name is Henrietta Shapiro

Actress or King Hussein Lying

NEW YORK (P-O) — It's difficult who to believe, Actress Susan Cabot or King Hussein, but Hussein has good reason to deny that he's interested in the Hollywood girl.

IF WORD ever gets back to Jordan that Susan's real name is Henrietta Shapiro, that will be the quick end of another Arab dynasty.

Boston-born and Bronx bred, Miss Cabot was asked by The POST and OPINION if the Arab king knows that she is a Jewess.

"I DIDN'T tell him, but I assume that he was told. I really don't see anything wrong to go out with Hussein. He is the most charming man I have ever met."

Hussein, reached in the midwest, said he had not dated Miss Cabot, as she had told reporters

MISS CABOT is under contract by Universal-International and plays mostly in westerns. She told The POST and OPINION that she is fond of blintzes and is going to celebrate the seders with relatives in the Bronx.

Asked if she would go to Jordan, which does not allow Jews to enter, with Hussein, she replied that it's too early to discuss anything of that kind. "I don't care to discuss my personal affairs in public."

Teachers Strike At All-Day School

FAR ROCKAWAY, N. Y. (P-O) —The morning classes at the Hebrew Institute of Long Island, 23-year-old Jewish all-day school here, have been suspended all week following a strike of the 33 Hebrew teachers. Afternoon classes, which are taught in English, are not involved.

A TOTAL of 730 pupils were affected by the strike, called by the Local 1707 of the Community and Social Agency Employees Union. The teachers are seeking union recognition.

The 600-strong Hebrew Teachers Union joined local 1707 of the American Federation of Labor to strengthen its bargaining position with Jewish schools.

LOCAL 1707 consists of workers in some 50 Jewish social and philanthropic organizations.

Officials of the Hebrew Teachers Union asserted that a number of Jewish educational institutions had refused to bargain with union leaders or even to recognize the union.

2 WIN MEDAL

NEW YORK (P-O) — Eleanor Roosevelt and the president of Yale University, A. Whitney Griswold, have been named recipients of the 1959 Universal Brotherhood Medal by the Jewish Theological Seminary of America.

Economic News From Israel Good

JERUSALEM (P-O)—The economic news from Israel was all good this week, at least in three important sectors of the business world of the Jewish state.

ISRAEL ROGOSIN, who at one time had cancelled plans for his $20 million rayon mill, and then proceeded on a much less grandiose scale with a $3.5 million mill, is adding to his investment. He will build a $5 million addition to the plant at Ashdod, which is hardly more than 6 months old.

Eight leading Israeli drug manufacturers have joined in organizing an exporting firm which will brand their items under one name. Exports for the initial year are expected to reach $3 million.

SOLEL BONEH, the giant construction firm owned by the Histadrut, announced that its development projects in Cyprus, Ghana, Burma and Western Nigeria are already employing 250 Israeli engineers and technicians. The company said it had many other offers from African nations for similar work, but its limited capacity forced it to forego most of them.

Liz Already Acting Like a Good Jew

TEL AVIV (P-O) — Elizabeth Taylor who has only been a Jew for a few weeks, is already acting like a good Jew.

Announcement was made here of the contribution by Miss Taylor of 125,000 Israeli pounds ($68,750) to complete the auditorium of the new Chamber Theatre. The 1,000-seat auditorium will be named after Miss Taylor's late husband, Mike Todd.

Non-Zionists Get Bid For Agency Board

By GERSHON JACOBSON

NEW YORK (P-O)—A major step to include non-Zionist representation into the Jewish Agency was taken here last week at a luncheon of the presidents of 17 major national Jewish organizations.

Only the American Jewish Committee, of all the important U.S. Jewish organizations, was not represented at the luncheon.

Goldmann

For the first time, Dr. Nahum Goldmann, chairman of the Jewish Agency, publicly discussed with the organizations their affiliation with the Agency. Heretofore negotiations on the subject had been with individuals, not organizations.

The two most important non-Zionist groups —the B'nai B'rith and the National Council of Jewish Women—were represented at the luncheon.

DR. GOLDMANN'S proposal was for the formation of an advisory committee to the Jewish Agency. The committee would be formed from the President's Conference, a loosely-organized body made up of the presidents of the national Jewish organizations. This same group formed an ad hoc Committee of Presidents for the 1959 United Jewish Appeal recently.

The advisory committee would undertake to study problems in Israel, to meet with the Jewish Agency when it adopted its budget and to check to see how the funds of the Jewish Agency are spent. The Jewish Agency funds come from the U.J.A. in the U.S. and similar fund-raising bodies in other communities in the Diaspora.

GOLDMANN TOLD the luncheon, which followed the telephone hookup in which the presidents spoke in behalf of the UJA to some 3000 community leaders throughout the U.S., that the proposal would eliminate the difficulties that prevail when some organizations are reluctant to undertake responsibility for some aspect of the work of the Jewish Agency in Israel. He did not give any details on what kind of work or who the specific organizations are who reject taking on these responsibilities.

The advisory committee, Goldmann explained, would be a trial experiment to give the Jewish Agency a chance to see how the arrangement works before giving full membership on the Jewish Agency to non-Zionists.

GOLDDMANN WAS frank in his appraisal of the abnormality of the present situation.

"Jews give the money," he said, "and the Zionists spend it." He referred to the fact that only Zionists are members of the Jewish Agency, but funds for the Agency come from all Jews, Zionists and non-Zionists alike.

OTHER REASONS given by Goldmann were that Israel's great economic difficulty demands the inclusion of broader Jewish circles. He said the reorganization was necessary to bring new ideas and new people into the Agency.

Goldmann asserted that the present proposal was being made to all Jewish organizations, secular, rabbinical and lay, except for the American Jewish Committee, which he declared in principal refuses to join any organization.

"THERE'S A gentleman's agreement between us. We don't invite them officially and they don't turn us down."

The Presidents Conference voted to admit the three major rabbinical bodies and Young Israel.

MACHINERY for establishing the President's Conference on a more stable basis was introduced. Phil Klutznick was chosen chairman for a one-year term, and two vice chairmen will be named, one a Zionist and the other a non-Zionist. It was also decided to name a professional executive for the Conference. Judd Teller, who has been Mr. Goldmann's secretary, was named to the latter position temporarily.

Klutznick

Goldmann suggested that the individual organizations not try to reach a decision on becoming part of the advisory committee at this time. He urged that Klutznick lay out a definitive program during the summer after which the executive boards of the organizations would have a chance to study the proposal.

REPRESENTATIVES of the Joint Distribution Committee and the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds attended

Comment

By M. Z. FRANK

Dr. Nahum Goldmann has lately reached a stage in his discussions with non-Zionists where it is reasonable to expect some concrete results. If that happens, the relations between Israel and the Jewish organizations in the Diaspora will be regulated on a more or less realistic basis.

THERE HAS been talk about regulating these relations ever since the State of Israel was founded. But until lately there were only two extreme views which were clearly formulated: one, by the Zionist leadership, that the World Zionist Organization should be granted a legal status like a state-like body equal to Israel and, as such, should be recognized as the sole representation of the Diaspora; the other view represented by Ben-Gurion was that there is no need for a World Zionist Organization, or a Jewish Agency, but that Jews in Israel and the Government of Israel should deal with Jews and Jewish organizations in the Diaspora on an individual basis.

During all these years, since 1949, neither view was acted upon. The Jewish Agency was neither liquidated nor reformed, but has carried on as in the past. Its vast army of officials consists almost exclusively of Israelis. The work these officials do is of tremendous importance and involves vast sums of money: The Jewish Agency carries on the work of immigration and colonization with the funds provided by the United Jewish Appeal in America and similar funds raised by Jews in other countries.

THE JEWISH Agency officials are not the officials of the Israel Government. A government official is answerable ultimately to the Minister, who in turn, is responsible to the Knesset. A Jewish Agency official is answerable to the Director of the Department where he is employed. But to whom is the Director responsible? Who elects him?

Detailed answers to the above questions would be too complicated and too long and would make dull reading. But the question that confronts us is: what, if any, are the reforms contemplated by Dr. Goldmann and the non-Zionists he will bring into the Agency—assuming he does bring them in?

UNTIL NOW the Zionist parties represented in the Agency have been carrying on Zionist party politics within the Agency and have tried, rather unsuccessfully to affect party politics in Israel. Each Zionist party has been given a share of jobs in the Agency and an allocation of funds for more or less thinly disguised party activity. What will men like Philip Klutznick and Maurice Eisendrath do about party politics when they come into the Agency? Have those problems been discussed?

Dr. Goldmann became chairman of the Jewish Agency and President of the World Zionist Organization in the summer of 1956. Until lately he devoted more time to running—or trying to run—Israel's foreign policy than to running the Agency and the WZO. The speeches he delivered during the past two and a half years betray very little confidence in the future of the Zionist movement. In fact, he has been telling the Zionists they are suffering from sclerosis. Now he seems to have gotten down in earnest to the business of reforming—not the Zionist movement, but the Jewish Agency.

IF HE SUCCEEDS, it will be the most important development in Diaspora-Israel relations since the establishment of the State.

Tells Jewish Editor Resort Not Restricted

Senator Defends Stay at Hotel

(See Editorial This Issue)

MIAMI, Fla. (P-O) — Editor Leo Mindlin and Senator Ernest Gruening, former territorial governor of Alaska who was just elected that new state's U.S. Senator, had a setto here this week over the Senator's stay at the Key Biscayne Hotel, which bars Jews.

WRITING in his weekly column in The Jewish Floridian, Mindlin told Gruening about the hotel's restrictive policy.

"I don't care to get involved," was Gruening's reply.

"But it is a restricted resort, Mindlin persisted. "I am certain you wouldn't knowingly stay at such an accommodation."

The senator, Mindlin wrote, cut him short.

"I DON'T believe it is."

Gruening then told Mindlin that other senators stayed at the hostelry often and referred to Vice-President Nixon's frequent visits there (P-O, Apr. 10) commenting that Nixon was at the hotel at the very moment.

GRUENING told Mindlin that he had come to Miami to speak to a banquet sponsored by Temple Israel for the Mt. Sinai Hospital development.

Mindlin then plied Gruening with this question. "Have you spoken with the hotel manager about his attitude toward Jewish guests?"

Mindlin said Gruening replied in the negative.

"Do you care," persisted Mindlin, "to be informed on just what his attitude is?"

SEN. GRUENING responded quickly, "I do not." Then the Senator added, "I don't care to get involved in controversy. I have stayed here every time."

U.S. Stamp May Honor Sholom Aleichem

WASHINGTON, D.C. (P-O)—The Citizen's Stamp Advisory Committee of the U.S. Post Office has before it a proposal to issue a special stamp honoring the memory of Sholom Aleichem, the famous Jewish author the centenary of whose birth is being celebrated this year. The proposal was made by the Jewish Labor Committee and the Congress of Jewish Culture.

This Passover
THE HOLIDAY OF THE EXODUS FROM EGYPT
AND THE EXODUS FROM ROMANIA
EATS A "GUEST" AT THE SEDER TABLE

On this Passover, there should be at every Seder in every Jewish home a "guest"—a hungry homeless Jew from across the sea. It is a traditional beautiful custom to have a guest at the Sabbath and holiday table. Friends, you can make a reality of this humane Jewish "mitzvah" by contributing to the special emergency fund for the Romanian aliyah. This is a fund which will rescue tens of thousands of Jews—our flesh and blood—from extinction. This fund will enable them to live a new life, in a new home of freedom in the land of Israel.

Our hearts become filled with long yearned joy at this long expected aliyah of exodus Romania and other countries, from which, until now, they have not been able to emigrate. In addition to the joy, friends, there is the obligation to help realize the aliyah and provide the necessary means to get established in the land of Israel.

The exodus from Romania is different from the exodus from Egypt. They come empty-handed. Their belongings have been confiscated. We need but take an example from Israel. This small poor country has made every sacrifice as was demanded of it. They have a special emergency fund for just such purposes. It is our obligation to answer the need of this rescue fund.

You will feel exalted and truly in the holiday spirit at the seder table by responding to the call to rescue Jewish lives.

We send our hearty regards, on this holiday of freedom, to the Jews of Israel and wish them success in their holy work.

We wish everybody a happy and Kosher Passover.

Solomon Blatt Says Negro's Progress Exceptional

Dangerous Inclinations of Some Jews In Integration Fight Hit by Political Head

By THOMAS J. TOBIAS

CHARLESTON, South Carolina (P-O) — The role of some Jews in the segregation controversy was criticized here By Solomon Blatt, speaker of the South Carolina House of Representatives for almost 20 years.

Blatt

"There are dangerous inclinations," he declared, "among some of the Jewish people in America today, out of the goodness of their hearts, to establish themselves as a minority force in the tragically exaggerated storm of political propaganda which surrounds and confuses the Negro question in the South."

Blatt expressed his views before the 175th anniversary meeting of the Hebrew Benevolent Society of Charleston, the oldest Jewish charitable organization in the U.S. He was introduced by South Carolina's Gov. Ernest G. Hollings, who pointed out that Blatt not only was the first Jew to hold the speakership but also had served longer than any speaker in the state's history."

BLATT asserted that "never before in any other part of the world has so much relative progress been made by the Negro as he has enjoyed in the South during the present generation."

He challenged those who compared the treatment of the Negro in the South with conditions "which prevailed during the Hitler persecutions of Jews in Germany.

"IF THERE were any such persecutions against any particular race in America, I think that all good Americans should and would rally to defend the oppressed, whomever they might be."

Blatt reviewed the long history of the Benevolent Society which was founded in 1784, just after the American Revolution by Jews who had begun to settle in Charleston as early as 1695.

HE RECALLED that Francis Salvador of South Carolina was the first Jew to hold an important elective office in the New World when he became a member of the state's provincial congress in 1775. He later was the first Jew to die in the war for American independence.

Blatt, referring to himself as the son of a Russian immigrant peddler who came to South Carolina, said: "As a Jew and proud of it, I feel I can speak from full experience that there is no intolerance in public life in South Carolina."

SENATORS MAY RESTORE ISRAEL GRANT-IN-AID

By ZALMAN DISKIND

WILMINGTON, Del. (PO)—A group of senators are planning to file an amendment to the Mutual aid bill to restore Israel to nations receiving grant-in-aid.

This was revealed by Sen. Estes Kefauver, who was here to address an Israel bond banquet.

The Tennessee Senator said that although he is not on the foreign relations committee, he had talked with some of the members and they had expressed surprise that Israel had been cut off from allocations.

This year Israel received $7.5 million in grant-in-aid.

LEAVES RUSSIANS IN ANTARCTIC IN TIME TO SEE SON BAR MITZVA

WASHINGTON, D. C. (P-O)—There's nothing quite like good Jewish cooking — unless it's good Russian cooking, according to a man who tried the Russian kind at the South Pole.

Rubin

Morton J. Rubin, Washington meteorologist with the U. S. weather bureau, returned last month from over a year in Mirny, Soviet antarctic base, just in time for a very important occasion—the bar mitzva of his son John.

Getting used to Russian food in the antarctic was no problem for Rubin. Thanks to the East European cooking he had long enjoyed as prepared by his mother-in-law, "Baba Rifkin," the meteorologist found himself no stranger to such Russian dishes as kasha, flommen, compote, smetna (thick sour cream), gedempte flaishe, the inevitable chicken and chicken soup for festive occasions, very good sour rye bread and tea from a "cheyenick" in a glass with a lemon.

As "Baba Rifkin" would say, "How else?"

Under a U. S. and USSR exchange agreement, the 41-year-old American Jewish scientist was selected by the U. S. Committee for the International Geophysical Year for the unique experience of working and living for almost a year and a half with the 145 Russians who occupied Mirny.

During Rubin's long absence from home, his charming wife Goldie saw to it that their three children, Richard 16, John soon to be 13, and Mary Sue 9, kept up their Jewish studies and synagogue attendance.

Small Towns, Here's the Answer to Your Kashrut Problems

Two Non-Jews Help Bring Kashrut to Small Town

LEXINGTON, Ky. (P-O)—An answer to the problem of kashrut in small Jewish communities has been found here.

WITH THE help of a Presbyterian deacon and a Baptist baker, Rabbi Stanley Wagner (Orthodox) has solved the problem to the delight of the city's 300 Jewish families, not all of whom like kosher of course, but all of whom like Jewish delicacies on their table.

Wagner

The need for action became acute last summer when the city's lone Jewish butcher shop, operated for 40 years by the Rev. Harry Goller, closed.

RABBI WAGNER, a Yeshiva U. graduate and occupant of the Ohavay Zion pulpit here since 1947, approached Deacon Frank Lyle, owner of Lyle's market, the largest privately-operated super market in the city, with his plan.

If Lyle's would stock kosher items, Rabbi Wagner argued, it not only would add to his business by the additional sales on these products, but it would bring Jewish traffic to his store for other food purchases too.

NOW, AFTER several months of operation, the grocer says:

"It's going along fine, and increasing all the time. We've changed the kosher items to a special section and installed a number of new products people have told me about."

The original list of foods, issued to all Jewish families here, made an immediate and marked change in the habits of many local housewives. Those who had been making trips to Louisville or Cincinnati largely to resupply their kosher shelves began patronizing Lyle's instead. The grocer admits that he sees many new faces not only at the kosher section but at the fresh vegetable and canned goods sections as well.

THE BAPTIST baker got so involved that he transformed his entire bakery into a strictly kosher operation.

Leslie Magee, owner of a four-store bakery chain, was convinced that koshering his largest bakery would be worth the work it took.

Under the supervision of Rabbi Wagner, non-kosher ingredients were replaced by kosher ones and a team of six men armed with blowtorches and boiling cauldrons kosherized Magee's ovens, machinery and all utensils.

Now the rabbi, still working without remuneration, spends an hour or more of his time each week to see that the bakery remains strictly kosher.

"ACTUALLY, becoming a kosher bakery has not been a simple task for us," Magee wrote

NON-JEWISH STORE BRINGS KOSHER L'PESAH FOODS TO SMALL TOWN

the community in an open letter afterwards.

"Before Rabbi Stanley M. Wagner would certify our plant, we were required to make a great many changes. All cakes and pastries which by their very nature were not kosher had to be dropped. Kosher ingredients were substituted for non-kosher items. Utensils, ovens, bowls and pans had to be koshered. And most of all, under Rabbi Wagner's supervision, we must constantly maintain the high standards of kashrut required by Jewish law."

THERE IS STILL one area yet to be licked—kosher meats. Kosher delicatessen of course is on sale, but not meats. Rabbi Wagner explained that so far no producer of pre-packaged meats has been able to offer it to Lyle's at a price which is considered reasonable enough. The rabbi and the grocer hope to lick this problem, though, in the near future.

Passover this year has become the delight of the Jewish community.

THE STORE owner began by sending out complete lists of products available. These lists could not have been more complete, according to Rabbi Wagner. They cover two large legal-size sheets.

Other ways in which the store owner went out of his way for Pesah are:

- He sent his truck to Louisville for Pepsi-Cola kosher l'Pesah.
- He opened his store Sunday just for Passover shoppers.
- For the first time in Lexington history, he arranged for dairy deliveries from Louisville—one the day before Passover, the other Hal Hamoed Monday.

What has been done in Lexington is so unusual that the National Association of Retail Grocers is running a feature story on it in its trade journal Nargus.

LYLE'S carries everything from kosher chow mein to the traditionally favorite chopped liver and potato knishes. The few customer suggestions Lyle has received have been quickly incorporated, and even yahrzeit candles are sold. He also was quick to explain that none of his kosher items carry "mark-up" prices.

Although Magee's repeated efforts to master the art of bagel making have been abandoned, his new success with strudels and kihels, even hallas, has been broadcast throughout the Central Kentucky district. One baker, Ira Coy, a member of the Christian church, made a specialty of hamantashen to meet the Purim orders.

PRICES on Magee's regular bakery goods have not been changed; neither has the recognized high quality dropped. Thus the old excuse of "high prices" for keeping kosher no longer applies and Magee says many of his non-Jewish customers have begun to order the strudels he has made from old family recipes brought in by his new Jewish patrons. He also has had enough special orders for bar mitzva, brit and wedding receptions to warrant purchase of "Star of David" cookie molds.

Both merchants are vocally pleased with their part of the "bargain;" both have mailed second communications to every Lexington Jewish family, thanking them for the success of the venture.

AS FOR the rabbi, he comments: The worth of the entire four months of work lies in the fact that several families have been persuaded by the "ease" they never had before to return to strict adherence to the dietary laws.

Also, "It's nice to know that our women no longer must dread their role as hostess at the oneg shabbat with the former ordeal of ordering foodstuff from Cincinnati . . .

"And it's rewarding to know that more hallas are carried home from Magee's every Friday afternoon."

WOMEN'S VIEWPOINT

Foolish French Fashion! We Will Say Which Way

By HELEN COHEN

I don't wish to gloat loudly about the victory of the woman-on-the-street over the French fashion dictators. I may yet eat my words.

But it is my considered opinion that Paris is leading the fashion parade only so long as American women choose to follow.

Mister Designer may be prancing smartly at the head of the line but every once in a while he looks around to see how closely he is being followed by those slavishly obedient women, and now and then, I swear, he is dismayed to observe that the fool women just keep going their own way, wearing their old, well-loved and still usable clothes. So what does he do? Naturally he beats it over to the street where the gals are merrily marching on and places himself at their head again. He's the leader, no?

More power to us women.

Can You Explain Initiative To Your Seven Year Old?

Our little seven year old, in the second grade, is a bit disturbed because while her teacher marks "plusses" on her report card for just about everything, she keeps putting a check by the social trait, "Shows initiative."

So mama has to explain how one shows initiative.

Well, honey let's see . . . mmm . . . how can a tiny little girl in the second grade . . . just between you and me, dear, I really don't think that's so important. Let the big boys show the initiative, you just keep on making plusses in everything else.

WHAT'S ON THE AIR

'Lamp' to Show Orthodox Opportunity in U.S.

How Orthodoxy can go hand in hand with Americanism will be examined on a special television program this Sunday.

The Yeshiva Torah Vodaath and Mesivta, Brooklyn, N. Y., will sponsor a one-hour program in the CBS "Lamp Unto My Feet" series at 10 a.m. Sunday, April 19.

Rabbi Chaim Uri Lipschitz, director of the seminary's community service burea, will interview four Orthodox leaders on how America offers opportunities for strict adherence to the tenents of traditional Judaism and how this traditional observance at the same time helps foster the growth and development of American democracy.

Interviewed wil be Dr. Samuel I Askovitz, mathematician, surgeon and author, of Philadelphia, Pa.; Dr. J. B. Hayes, noted psychiatrist and chief of admissions at the Ohio State Hospital, Cincinnati, O.; Henry Hirsch, president of Welbilt Corp., Maspeth, N. Y., and Dr. Alvin Radowsky, physicist for the Atomic Energy Commission in Washington, D. C.

"The Final Ingredient," written for television by Reginald Rose, prize-winning author of the motion picture "Twelve Angry Men," will be presented by the Jewish Theological Seminary of America at 3:30 p. m. EST Sunday, Apr. 19, on the American Broadcasting co. network. Stars John Cassavetes, Martin Balsam, and Sam Jaffe will appear in the drama, which centers about the experiences of a group of prisoners in a German concentration camp during World War II.

Radio programs under conservative and Reform auspices will also be heard Sunday.

Rabbi Louis I. Newman of Congregation Rodeph Sholom, New York City, will speak on "Stephen S. Wise After Ten Years: A Memorial Tribute" on the Message of Israel radio program, ABC, at 10:05 a.m. Sunday, April 19.

"The Battle of the Warsaw Ghetto" will be presented on the Eternal Light radio program at 12:30 p.m. Sunday, April 19, on NBC. The program is 10th in a series of 15 programs marking the "Light's" 15th anniversary.

Whether you are a New Yorker or just visiting, here is your complete guide of important Jewish activities for the next ten days. In addition, these pages will help you find the type of entertainment you prefer, whether the stage, movies, lecture or concert hall.

THE ARTS

American in 'Kataki' Much Too Weak Compared to Japanese

By JOSEPH GALE

The road to Broadway, a pilgrimage most writers of dialogue are under compulsion to take once at least, is one of the thorniest in existence. It is supremely difficult to reach at all, let alone walk along it.

GALE

Last week, another newcomer tried, with uncertain if not altogether unfavorable results.

HE IS Shimon Wincelberg, who is parlaying a two-character play into a variety of entertainment — first for television, now for the stage, quite possibly later for motion pictures. British Commonwealth rights to the play already have been sold.

As a television exercise, "The Sea Is Boiling Hot" received mixed notices. As a two-act, full-length play renamed "Kataki" (The Enemy), which opened last week at the Ambassador, it earned mixed notices again.

SUCCESSFUL two-character essays are not new, but neither are they customary. The problems a playwright must solve are often debilitating — how to keep an audience interested, for instance, and how not to succumb to implausible devices to keep that interest from lagging. The author who tries it may wish to prove that he is a master of his craft, or he may be imbued with "a mission."

From what we hear of Mr. Wincelberg's background, more than likely there was something of the missionary in his thinking when he set out to prove the brotherhood of man in a story about a Japanese soldier and an American airman stranded on a sandspit in the Pacific.

SESSUE Hayakawa plays Kimura, the over-age-in-grade Japanese who solely occupies the island until Alvin (Ben Piazza), a parachuted navigator, enters his ken.

There is at first abject terror in the American, a stripling from the Midwest.

The Japanese, by contrast, is old enough to be a grandfather, perhaps. There is in him contempt for the boy with the parachute case still on his back, an awareness of the realities of war and a heavy resignation to it, a deep understanding of why he is there, an awareness of family, of dignity, of order.

THE TWO are wary with each other.

The Jap, who at a glance knows there is no threat in his unwanted companion, gives his attention to the business of staying alive and sane. He understands no English; the American knows scarcely a word of the Japanese language.

THEY CANNOT communicate by word of mouth. But they do communicate, and out of Alvin's unquenchable garrulity and Kimura's heart-laden paternalism grows one of the strangest friendships of modern drama. But in the final scene, when communication alone is not enough, Mr. Wincelberg's universal brotherhood dies quickly and cruelly at the locked door of understanding. Perhaps this, after all, is the lesson we are meant to learn.

How is interest sustained?

FROM OUR POINT of view, generally very well throughout. Alvin's vocabulary and thinking are varied enough to avoid undue repitition in his part. Kimura's words and interjections, hardly enough to fill a couple of pages all together, we dare say, come always at the strategic moment, conveying volumes of meaning.

Perhaps our threshhold of tolerance is high, since for us "Kataki" did not begin to grow tiresome until well toward the finish. And by that, the author may himself have realized there was nothing more to say.

AS KIMURA, 69-year-old Sessue Hayakawa, who was making $6,000 in Hollywood silent films when Ben Piazza was born, is nothing short of magnificent. Certainly his vocal role is one of the briefest on Broadway today, and spoken in his own tongue (how we yearned to understand), but for sheer acting he would be impossible to beat. His use of gesture and emotion is so knowing and spare that from the opening, his least movement of eye, lip or leg is as large as life. With little overt help from the playwright, he ingathers a storehouse of understanding and sympathy not only for the Japanese, but for all strangers to us. It is Hayakawa, an old master that he is, who invests "Kataki" with weight and a base.

His companion, of course, is the weakness in the play. Since Alvin is called upon to do more than 99 per cent of the talking, we have a greater opportunity to assess his character, and he is wanting.

WHERE KIMURA is made apparent by allusion and intuition, Alvin the American is no mystery at all. It is impossible to believe that any member of the Armed Forces could have been so callow as Alvin. His character is as obvious as a monochrome. Not being a mother, we cannot love this mother's boy who admits to his "enemy" he does not know why he fights.

Mr. Wincelberg has made the contrast too great. Much of Alvin's role is taken by the audience as comedy, and in the situation he has given us there is nothing to laugh about.

WHY COULD we not have had a man of about 30, somewhat more sophisticated, and let the audience work out the contrast and the message?

Not long after the opening of the second act, we become a little weary with this somewhat gallan, but puppy-doggish American, and wished Mr. Wincelberg would save him from his demise and us from him.

Mr. Piazza, who is 24, does exceedingly well in what may be one of the longest talkathons on record. There is no stumbling after lines, no affectedness in delivery—though some of what he is given to say comes rather awkwardly out of his Actor's Studio mouth.

MR. PIAZZA makes Alvin the youthful, blush-cheeked, gangling example the author no doubt wished him to be. He could hardly do otherwise; the conception was to blame not the interpretation of it. But as we remarked, we did weary of hearing him talk. We wanted more Hayakawa—and a transliteral guidebook in our laps.

David Amran, who did such an excellent job with the music for "J.B.," has put together bits and spots of music here that are quite as apt and provocative as in the other show. Essentially a jazzman, he writes originally and intuitively for the theater.

PETER DOHANO'S single set conveys the heat and inescapability of the lonely Pacific isle. Except for the matter of Alvin, director Alan Schneider's conscience can be clear; the action and business all were well-managed.

"Kataki" is a respectable first effort. Its flaws are to be condoned.

The play gives us no clue as to the author's direction in drama, but as an occasional contributor to this newspaper his convictions are not unknown. They are harsh and unyielding.

IT SPOOFS ITSELF

GAY 'GIGI' MAKES ONE FORGET CARES OF DAY

Finally, we were swept into the orbit of "Gigi" (MGM), the nine-time Academy Award winner, and should feel no surprise if, before its course is run, we see it once more at least.

"GIGI" is as polished as a gem and very gay.

The 10 songs—lyrics by Alan Jay Lerner, music by Frederick Loewe — if not memorable, are right for their purpose.

LERNER'S screen play about a tomboy flowered into womanhood wafts along with insouciance.

Cecil Beaton's costumes, scenery and design must rank among his masterpieces.

THE IRRESISTABLE charm of 19th Century "Gigi" is that it spoofs itself. Under Vincente Minnelli's direction, everyone has his tongue in cheek, but not aggressively, and everyone has, oh, such an infectiously wonderful time.

Maurice Chevalier is still the boulevadier, but at his age in such a comfortable way. Hermione Gingold as Mme. Alvarez is someone we cannot see enough of; she's a versatile gal. Isabel Jeans is priceless as the plastic-surgerized Aunt Alicia, whose ancient manners are read in memoirs. Louis Jourdan is refreshing as Gaston Lachaille, the millionaire playboy in love by the rules. John Abbott contributes a nice bit as Manuel the barber; and the others are Eva Gabor, who wears period costumes, cosmetics and color as if they were her way of life, and Jacques Bergerac, strangely wasted in the miniscule part of Sandomir, a skating instructor.

These people are so good at their jobs they make one forget the cares of the day. Is this not worth entertaining once, twice?

I THINK AS I PLEASE

5,000 CRIPPLED ISRAELI YOUTHS NEED HELP -- WILL PRIDE BE OVERRULED?

By CARL ALPERT

HAIFA — The average visitor to Israel tries to cover as much ground as possible and see all the sights. Much rarer is the tourist who concentrates on only a few subjects which appeal to him, to the neglect of all others. But most rare of all is the visitor who gives up his few precious vacation weeks, and devotes all his time to a high-level professional study of a field in which he is an expert—with an eye to offering helpful suggestions and advice.

Alpert

SUCH WAS the kind of busman's holiday which Ralph Segalman, executive director of the Jewish Federation of Waterbury, Conn., took last year. And from his "vacation" study has come a brief, 15-page closely typed report which serves nevertheless as a comprehensive review of the problem of crippled children in Israel.

A careful analysis of available figures appears to indicate that close to 5,000 crippled children in the country require care and special attention. Of these, more than half suffer from the after-effects of polio; about 1,500 are victims of cerebral palsy, and the remainder of other miscellaneous causes.

ISRAEL'S PROBLEMS are quite different from those in the United States. Home care is complicated by several factors. Most families do not have a car, to provide necessary transportation for treatment or therapy. Apartments are much smaller than in America, leaving little room for the disabled child. The mother is usually burdened with many more household duties, and hence has less time to care for the youngster.

It is not surprising, therefore, to find that there are many public agencies which occupy themselves with one or another aspects of the problem. Indeed, the tragic problem is not so much lack of help, as of complications due to inadequate co-ordination and joint planning. The poor family burdened with a handicapped child is often bewildered by the various services offered, and the head of the house must spend much time going from one bureau to another. Thus, he will discover that in order to procure needed braces for his crippled son, he can obtain 50 per cent of the cost from one agency, 25 per cent from another, and 25 per cent from still a third. Each body recognizes and accepts only limited responsibility Perhaps this is due to professional respect for what others are doing in the field, and unwillingness to "compete." Perhaps it is because available funds are limited to each.

SOME OF THE agencies have adopted American style advertising and fund-raising patterns, with the result that certain diseases are well known and tend to receive further support, whereas others are unpublicized, and hence relatively neglected.

The bodies involved are both governmental and private, and each one without exception is doing splendid work in its own area. The Ministry of Health, the Ministry of Welfare, the Jewish Agency, Kupat Cholim, Ilanshil, Crippled Children's Association, Hadassah, the Van Leer Foundation, and Malben are among the names which come to mind when reviewing the services rendered. Yet there is no central planning, no pooling of resources — and none can take the initiative for the usual reasons which operate in "competitive" social welfare work. Mr. Segalman has rendered an important service in making this survey and in pinpointing some of the problems.

This should not be the end, however. I know that the United Nations provides technical assistance to many countries in just such areas, where objective, impartial, professional experts are required to cut across local prejudices.

The UN cannot take the initiative. Application must come from the government. Israel values highly the technical assistance which it is getting from the UN in the fields of industry, agriculture and education. The subject dealt with here is also of extreme importance. Who will show initiative? The Ministry of Welfare, which has just been reorganized with a new minister and a new director? The Prime Minister's office?

The welfare of some 5,000 unfortunate children is at stake—and that is more important than the reputation of organizations or the pride of professional workers.

Your Name

Want to know what your name means? Address your questions to Mr. Pearlroth, National Jewish POST and OPINION, Box 1633, Indianapolis 6, Indiana.

—By N. PEARLROTH—

DEAR MR. PEARLROTH: I would very much appreciate your telling me the origin of the name Fuchsbrunner. I was born in Warsaw, Poland.—BENJAMIN R. FUCHS, Scarsdale, N. Y.

FUCHSBRUNNER referring to "The Well of the Fox" is the family name of two unrelated families. One obtained the name by combining two family names Fuchs and Brunner, the latter name being that of a well digger, the other family acquired the name in 1796 when Warsaw was occupied by the Prussians. Fuchsbrunner is not unknown among non-Jewish Germans who derived it from a well frequented by foxes ages ago. The Prussian choice of names was quite arbitrary in Warsaw. If they saw fit they would deal out a family name which was either their own or that of some of their acquaintances in Prussia. This is how you came by your name. Fuchs alone was originally a nickname derived from a person's appearance or the reddish color of his hair. The Polish equivalent is Lis.

DEAR MR. PEARLROTH: We all will be very much interested in learning what information you can provide on our name. The family is from Lithuania, but whether or not that is the origin they do not know. Nor do they know if the name has been shortened or changed from its original form.—MRS. WILBUR ROSICHAN, Cleveland Hts. 18, O.

ROSICHAN is a family name of geographical origin. Its source is the town of Rosica in the district of Dryssa in the government (gubernia) of Witebsk. This is not a Lithuanian but Latvian part of old Russia. It is possible that your ancestors immigrated from Latvia to Lithuania but commemorated their Latvian origin in their family name. The terminal ". . . an" denotes origin.

Who's Who in Zionist Thought? Herzberg's Anthology Tells All in a Remarkable Way

THE ZIONIST IDEA, by Arthur Herzberg, $7.50 (Doubleday & Herzl Press.)

Following an extended and excellent introduction on the Zionist idea and its history, Rabbi Hertzberg has accomplished a remarkable feat of selection and definitiveness from the writings of the important protagonists of that ideal.

BURSTEIN

He begins with the traditionalists Alkalai and Kalischer (as Y. M. Pines has written: "Religion is the source of Jewish nationalism"); then proceeds to Hess and to Smolenskin, Pinsker, and their 19th Century compeers. Then come Herzl and Nordau; the next part includes Ahad Ha-am, Bialik, and others of minor traditionalism in religion. There follow sections for the Marxists and Utopians, the religious nationalists, the intellectuals (such as Fleg, Lewisohn, Schechter, Brandeis, Kaplan), and finally the ideologists in action — Bar-Ilan, Jabotinsky, Weizmann, Silver, and Ben-Gurion.

Well-done brief introductions precede each author; there are notes and a bibliography. The compiler has obviously devoted years of labor to his work; it displays a finish in arrangement and style that marks the superlative anthologist, who knows all about his subject and comprehends in his anthology all that should be known.

One of the best products of post-Messianic Zionism.

ABRAHAM BURSTEIN

WHAT FOODS THESE MORSELS BE

BE SURE TO MAKE UP FOR FOOD ELEMENTS PESAH STAPLES LACK

By SARAH LIEBER

By now, in every well-run home, most of the Passover preparations should be done.

Of course, we all have a number of last-minute things to do before the first seder, but the major chores are over. There remains chiefly, using up the year - 'round foods. Then, we must clean out the hometz. And lastly, and most importantly, we must make ready all the maiholim for the sedarim.

Sarah

EVERY YEAR I repeat the same advice to everyone. Don't try to feed the family and guests all the good dishes at one meal. Save some for later in the week And, since there are several food elements which are lacking in the Passover restrictions, try to make up for the lack by planning the meals of the week with even greater care than usual.

For exampe, vitamin B is almost non-existent in the usual Passover foods, since there are no whole grains or cereals used. Therefore, it is most essential that you serve liver several times during the week.

Also, the yellow vegetables, and the yolk of egg, dried fruits and some other foods may contain this nutrition essential. Be sure to take that into account

ALSO, SERVE a good variety of fruits, vegetables and salads to help counteract the heaviness of the old-fashioned foods. Dairy products should be used in many ways, and fish, too, will help supplement the nutritional elements.

Below ars some seder menu ideas I hope you will be able to use.

MENU I
- gefilte fish
- horseradish in cucumber cups
- clear chicken broth
- kneidlah
- roast capon
- matzo stuffing with walnuts
- cranberry and orange relish
- asparagus
- tomato and lettuce salad
- fresh fruit compote
- sponge cake with wine sauce
- black coffee

MENU II
- chopped liver in lettuce cups
- celery and carrot sticks
- chicken broth with mandelen
- roast turkey
- sweet potato stuffing
- broccoli
- tossed greens salad
- applesauce
- banana sponge cake
- black coffee

MENU III
- tiny gefilte fish balls
- beets and horseradish relish
- chicken soup with matzo farfel
- roast chicken
- matzo charlotte
- honeyed carrots
- cole slaw
- orange, grapefruit and pineapple cup
- macaroons
- black coffee

MENU IV
- gefilte fish dip
- matzos
- roast beef
- parsley potatoes
- sweet sour beets
- tomato and green pepper salad

stewed rhubarb and strawberries nut cake
black coffee

MENU V

chopped liver in celery sticks gefilte fish slices on beet rounds beef broth
broiled chicken
cauliflower with browned matzo meal sauce grated raw carrot and celery salad spong cake with haroset sauce
black coffee

MATZO CHARLOTTE

2 matzos
water to cover
3 eggs, separated
¼ cup melted shortening, oil or schmaltz
½ cup sugar
¼ tsp. salt
2 cups sliced tart apples
¼ cup chopped almonds
½ tsp. cinnamon

Soak the matzos in the water until soft. Squeeze out excess water. Stir with a fork until creamy. Add shortening. Beat egg yolks, sugar, salt and cinnamon and add. Mix thoroughly. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry and fold into the mixture very carefully. Pour into a greased baking dish, alternating a layer of matzo mixture with a layer of sliced apples. Top with chopped almonds. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) about one half hour or until brown. Serve hot. Serves 6.

HAROSET SAUCE FOR CAKE OR KUGEL

¾ cup chopped apple
1 tblsp. lemon juice
1 tblsp. potato starch
¼ cup sugar
¾ cup water
⅓ cup honey
½ cup chopped walnut meats
¾ cup wine

Mix the chopped apple with the lemon juice and set aside. Combine potato starch and sugar in a saucepan. Gradually add water and stir until smooth. Stir in honey. Cook over moderate heat, stirring constantly until the mixture thickens and is transparent. Cool. Add apple and nuts. Chill. Just before serving, add the wine. Delightful over sponge cake or matzo kugel.

MATZO STUFFING FOR POULTRY

¾ cup chicken schmaltz or vegetable shortening
½ cup minced onion
10 matzos, finely broken
1 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
1 tblsp. paprika
2 tblsps. minced parsley
1 cup diced celery (optional)
1 egg
2 cups clear chicken broth

Saute the onion and celery in the fat until tender but not brown. Add broken matzos and toast lightly. Beat the egg and add to the broth. Add seasonings and stir into the matzo mixture. If a more moist stuffing is desired, add more broth. To vary, add mushrooms or nut meats. Sufficient to stuff a 10 to 12 pound bird.

A Word To The Wives

Try to get as much done early in the morning as you can, so that you may have a little rest before the festivities begin.

And delegating some of the chores to the willing youngsters or to any other one who offers will honor them and help you.

NIXON SHOULD ANSWER

We think that the Jews of the United States are entitled to an answer from Vice-President Nixon in connection with this staying at the Key Biscayne Hotel in Miami Beach (P-O, Apr. 19), which discriminates against Jews.

WE THINK that if Mr. Nixon prefers to try to let this one blow over, our Jewish civic-defense agencies should go after him or else drop altogether the case against hotels which bar Jews.

The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith recently issued a national survey of cities where housing discrimination against Jews persists.

THE AMERICAN Jewish Committee is seeking to break down the wall of separation which bars Jews from membership in city clubs.

Why then tred softly when Mr. Nixon, who hopes to be President, is involved?

AS TO SEN. Ernest Gruening, that is another matter altogether. By being admitted to the hotel, we can assume he is one of those Jews who like Bernard Baruch has risen above us and doesn't have to suffer penalties for his Jewishness like most of the rest of us. He can get admitted anywhere. But we assure both of these gentlemen that their reputation in the Jewish community is nowhere what it is in the general community. And if they chose to ignore Jewish public opiinon, that is all the more to their discredit.

We should here pay our respects to enterprising Leo Mindlin, editor of The Jewish Floridian, who nailed both these gentlemen and taxed Mr. Nixon for expressing his shock just before the 1956 elections when he was scheduled to stay at a discriminatory hotel in St. Petersburg, and then after the election resuming his customary trips to the Key Biscayne.

LIBERAL JUDAISM IN ISRAEL

The Orthodox will not like the outspoken and even harsh way in which Rabbi Maurice Eisendrath criticized their reign in Israel (P-O, Apr. 10). But Rabbi Eisendrath is not noted for mincing his words.

WE COULD agree with what he says, although the decade time limit he sets for the forthcoming dominance of a liberal expression of Judaism in Israel seems mighty short. It is so short in fact, that in 1969 he may have to eat these words.

Both the Reform and the Orthodox in the U. S. have to understand a great deal more about Israel and its attitude towards religion than these words of Rabbi Eisendrath would indicate.

FOR ONE thing, Orthodoxy in Israel had to be as insistent as it has on strict adherence because of the enmity towards religion of the founding fathers of the Jewish state. One extreme created the other.

Reform which at one point spent a great deal of time in attacking Orthodoxy in Israel has in late years assumed a more mature view. The Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion will soon dedicate a school in Jerusalem, and the Jewish Theological Seminary of America a dormitory or Israeli branch, whichever you prefer to call it.

THE PROCEDURE which seems to have been agreed on by the Conservative and Reform leadership is statesmanlike in that it says that if an American type of Judaism is to prosper in Israel, it will have to be indigenous to the country.

Already several non-Orthodox congregations have been holding services in the principal cities of the Jewish state.

But it is a little early to predict.

A MUCH MORE desired eventuality would be one in which Orthodoxy itself would accommodate itself to modern living. In this way, not only would the Israeli Judaism become a way of life for Jews there, but it would serve to bolster Orthodoxy in the U. S. too.

We fear however that Orthodox leaders are human, and as such will learn only the hard way, unless of course religion in Israel gets the kind of inspired leadership which in times past has united the Jewish community under essentially only one brand of Judaism.

FRIDAY, APRIL 17, 1959

The EDITOR'S CHAIR . . .

A speaker before a local chapter of a national Jewish organization asked that several sections of his talk be off the record to our reporter.

This is a normal request, and we follow a policy which most legitimate papers employ and that is that the reporter makes no promises, only agrees that the request will be relayed to the edtiors for their consideration.

ONLY THE EDITOR, under this policy, can agree to refrain from using material. He often will refuse to enter a meeting which is going to be what has grown euphemistically to be called "off the record." He knows whenever someone speaks to a large group an alert reporter can always get an accurate account of what took place from any number of people who attended.

This off-the-record policy is often carried to ludicrous extremes.

THERE WILL BE a national meeting in which the hall is crowded with perhaps 1000 people from all parts of the country. The reporters are told that the transactions at the meeting are off the record, despite the fact that 1000 people go back to perhaps 300 or 400 communities and report what took place.

Prior to the recent United Jewish Appeal national conference of national Jewish organizations on the Rumanian exodus, reporters for leading Jewish papers and news agencies were briefed carefully so that nothing would be carried about Rumania that this Iron Curtain country would consider as antagonistic.

WE TOOK PAINS to try to co-operate.

The cloak-and-dagger atmosphere was carried through even at the conference, where we were told someone would be stationed at the door to keep out all but authorized delegates.

When two officials of the Rumanian government sat down uninvited at the press table and stayed through the entire proceedings, we gave up. We went back to the conveners of the conference who had pledged us to such secrecy and their only explanation was that about an hour after the meeting began it was found that it would be impossible to screen everyone. So the watchers were withdrawn from the doors and anyone who cared could enter.

But not to get off the subject, let us proceed with the request of the gentleman from the national Jewish organization to keep these two items off the record.

ONE HAS TO DO with studies—very well publicized—of anti-Jewish material used in religious textbooks in America.

The second had to do with a movie which showed Jews involved in the persecution of Jesus.

THIS ONE national Jewish organization will make a full report, so it can get full credit, of the textbook survey, and make it at a time and in such a way that The POST and OPINION won't be able to print it first hand. It will be made at one of the conventions of the organization at a time when they can get a column in the New York Times, which is in truth their bible. If we want to print it, we will have to copy it from the New York Times, even though we know about it now and accept an "off-the-record" censorship.

Consider the unfairness. If our reporters are alert and do cover talks where there is news divulged, and if the editors are willing to withhold the news because it is off the record, then in all fairness, shouldn't this paper get an even break with other papers so that it can have the news at least at the same time as the daily papers?

WE AREN'T asking that we be given the news prior to the daily papers. What we do ask is that we not be shoved aside and run over in a rush to get into the daily papers, which is nothing less than undignified and shows a lack of self-respect.

More About "Raisin in the Sun"

By RABBI JACOB J. WEINSTEIN
KAM Temple, Chicago

The scene where the agent of the Clybourne Improvement assn. tries to dissuade the Youngers from moving into an all-white neighborhood will make a lot of people uncomfortable; but if a play is to be a real catharsis, it must build up some tension and some guilt.

Rabbi Weinstein

I don't think people in lily-white enighborhoods will like this scene. And yet it answers the segregationists in the best and most-effective manner.

IN THIS scene, Lorraine Hansberry shows her honesty, her compassion, her maturity. She could have had the white man, the only white character in the play, a bit of a cracker, with all the vulgar prejudices of the bigot. She chose rather to represent him as a kindly person who hates violence and who represents modest people like himself, who have put everything into their homes and want to preserve their investment and their way of life.

Deeper fears and deeper differences are revealed only in side remarks; as when Ruth asks, "Are the white people afraid that we are going to eat them?" and Beneatha's answer, "No, they are afraid we are going to marry them."

WELL, AFTER a very subtle kind of roll call, the family decides unanimously to move into that two-story at 406 Clybourne st.

They move from the rat-infested kitchenette, where they have known so much of anguish and so much of terror, into the sunlit, all-white neighborhood. The curtain comes down on Ma Lena Younger taking the little scrawny plant which she has nurtured in the narrow slant of sun coming through the one stingy window of her apartment; and everyone in that audience catches the meaning of that symbol.

And each and every member of the audience knows that the plant is the hardy perennial we call brotherhood and whether it lives or dies at 406 Clybourne is going to depend not only on the loving care of the Youngers, but on the attitude of their neighbors. If the people in 404 and 408, and the people across the street in 407 and 409 open their hearts and treat the Youngers as fellow human beings, that plant will grow and become a great tree and give us all of its fruit and its shade. But if they receive them with bricks and stink bombs, the gall and bitterness which the white neighbors will engender in the black soul will spill over and the plant will wither, shrivel up and die, "like a raisin in the sun."

THE MOVERS who take the Younger family from their South Side rathole to their new suburban home are the vanguard of an exodus as significant as the one we celebrate in scripture and song.

The children of slaves are moving from a station in their journey from the land of Pharaoh. Under the great Lincoln, they lost their chains and came to the Cis-Jordan, where they could see the promised land but not enter it.

It will be recorded that it was often more bitter to have had the name of free men without the substance, than to have had neither the name nor the substance. It will also be recorded that the fetters—the invisible, inchoate fetters—of unspoken prejudices, of social conventions, of property covenants, were much more corrosive in the flesh than the visible chains of tyranny. It will also be recorded that in being despoiled, they often turned about and despoiled their neighbors, so that the viciousness of a white con man reaped an act of violence or brigandage against an innocent white man; but God's justice is often hard cutting and inexorable.

AS BOTH Amos and Lincoln have reminded us, in a world where God is One and Indivisible, where each man is involved in mankind, Justice is a pooled justice and retribution spreads to the innocent, even as the pain of man-made wrong descends upon the undserving.

But the moral, good friends, is this: that all men are God's children and when God wants His children free, no one is going to stop them.

"God's love was not all on Israel spent," Paul Laurence Dunbar reminds us; and "He will send some Moses to set His children free."

It is the glory of such talents as that of Lorraine Hansberry Nemiroff that they can make so many Toms, Dicks, Harrys and Jakes feel that they, too, can be a Moses and make a way in the neon wilderness to that long-promised land.

Jews Who Support Migration to Israel Not Traitors to U.S.

• Editor, Jewish POST and OPINION:

In regard to E. Berger's letter in the Apr. 3 POST and OPINION, Rabbi Singer should know that Jews are being persecuted in the communistic counties because a real Jew is, by tradition and training, a democrat. As a rabbi, he should know that democracy is a basic principle of the Old Testament. Therefore, it is the obligation of Jews to help the Jews in communistic countries to emigrate.

Mr. Berger is fortunate that his ancestors came to America. Suppose he were one of the remnant that escaped from the gas chambers, where else could he have gone?

Only 600,000 Jews were in Palestine in 1948. What country, I pray you, would have admitted a million destitute Jews in 10 years?

Mr. Berger made this statement: ". . . now we know better, Weinstein holds. It is better to sublimate ourselves, as Americans, into the nationalism of a little state at the easternmost of the Mediterranean."

What Mr. Berger is implying is that Zionists and supporters in general of UJA are traitors to America!

If we are traitors, Mr. Berger, why don't you leave us? In our long history, we have lost your kind on all the highways and byways of the world.

As far as being traitors is concerned, the U. S Government will take care of us, it does not need your help. As a Zionist, my love for Israel has nothing to do with my patriotism. The U. S. Government knows that.

Lovers of Zion, as soldiers in World War I and World War II and the Korean War, have proven their patriotism.

An intelligent mate will not be jealous of one's love for parents. On the contrary, a loving child makes a better mate for the simple reason that she or he has a loving heart and sentiment. One love does not interfere with the other love.

How can one forget his birthplace? How could a Jew forget Zion? He was born and reared there. It has nothing to do with patriotism.

Why Give to Non-Real 'Exodus' With So Many in Need in U.S.?

• Editor, Jewish POST and OPINION:

I have read your paper for seven years now, frequently with irritation at a note of stridency and vulgarity that seems characteristic of a number of your writers, but always with sincere admiration for your courage in publishing some of the "other" side of questions where you yourself were deeply committed.

YOUR EDITORIAL "Rabbi Singer Answered" is typical. I sense that you are trying very hard to be fair; yet you are guilty of a terrible sin. You tell your readers that Rabbi Singer "denies a cardinal Jewish principle . . that all Israel are brothers." But Rabbi Singer said and believes that "all men are brothers." He said and he believes that this and this are true; the brotherhood of Israel and the brotherhood of man are one — they cannot be set against each other. It is precisely the Jewish nationalist who feels only a brotherhood for Jews and denies his brotherhood with non-Jews who reads into Rabbi Singer's sermon for brotherhood of man a "denial" of brotherhood of Jews.

You owe it to yourself and to your readers to make clear that Rabbi Singer did not deny the right of Jews to finance immigration of Jews from Rumania or Russia or Israel. What he questioned was the right of the Jewish Agency and UJA to presume that every Jew had a religious obligation as a Jew to support the political aims and policies of the Zionists just because their public relations men publicize the word "humanitarian."

YOUR OWN former managing editor, Moshe Kohn, wrote in your own paper referring to the Rumanian "exodus": "This was the first time in the history of Israel, perhaps, that any official circles had with some candor—probably without realizing it — spoken of immigrants and potential immigrants as a weapon of diplomacy and defense, or more bluntly, as potential cannon fodder. Some circles, not all of them cynical, dclared that Israeli officialdom, suddenly finding itself at a loss how to absorb the spurting immigration, had decided by such statements to give Arab diplomats ground for appealing to the Soviet Bloc to halt the immigration and the Soviet Bloc a face-saving excuse to heed the Arab appeal."

I don't know why Ben-Gurion, Shimon Peres and our own American big-mouths kept shouting about 100,000 Rumanian Jews and 2 million Russian Jews immigrating to Israel (except perhaps the obvious desire to pry dollars out of more pockets) but I think we can agree that the "exodus" has been halted. But as you say the fund drives continue.

YET AT this moment, hundreds and thousands of needy sick people are being turned aside by Chicago hospitals because their out-patient services are short of funds.

You say that Rabbi Singer "assumes that the Jewish community of the United States is made up of a bunch of simpletons . . ." That is your assumption. You did not read it in his sermon; you put the words in his mouth.

Oeli, are U. S Jews (and non-Jews) simpetons? Can they see the painful contradiction between having a Philip Klutznick (and others) saying, "Every Jew must give to UJA" ($4 million extra in Chicago alone) for a non-existant "exodus" while thousands of his fellow citizens lack medical care because the Community Fund is $2 million short?

In conclusion, it may be of interest to note that the same Rabbi Singer you denounce as a "bitter soul" was the recent recipient of a Freedom Foundation award for his sermon (preached at a community Thanksgiving worship service) "The State of Mind that Makes America Great."

Asks the Orthodox How Women Equal

• Editor, Jewish POST and OPINION

I would like to comment on the remarks of Rabbi Charles Weisberg to the Rabbinical Council of America convention (as reported in the Mar. 27 issue).

I quote: "There is no such religious concept as female inferiority in any of the holy teachings of Orthodoxy" and "I challenge Reform Judaism to refute the argument that Orthodox Judaism is not providing the woman with all the rights of an equalitarian, free, and unhindered environment."

Does not an Orthodox Jew in his morning prayers still say: "I thank Thee, O Lord, that Thou has not created me a woman"? Does not the Orthodox Jewess say: "I thank Thee, O Lord, that Thous hast created me according to Thy will"?

If I am wrong, I shall be glad to be corrected.

ISRAELI CLUBS CHALLENGE ALPERT ON SPORT CHARGE

• Editor Jewish POST and OPINION:

Our attention has been drawn to the column from Carl Alpert in your paper Jan. 16 [in which Alpert deplored the "rottenness" of sports in Israel].

IT IS INDEED most regrettable that Mr. Alpert, who presumes to "understand" everything about the condition of sports in Israel, should have to resort to such defamation, for the purpose of collecting funds for his own sports projects. . .

We are surprised that a man like Mr. Alpert, who serves an academic institution in this country, should arrogate to himself the right to brand our players as outlaws and the public as inhabitants of a jungle. Of course, there is much to be said on this subject, but we wish to refrain from cheap derogation and concentrate our efforts on the task of education towards higher standards of sportsmanship and achievement.

JUST THE same, a few words regarding the actual incidents, such as are liable to occur everywhere, and have indeed happened here. . .

Every father knows how difficult it is to keep a family in harmony together and educate its members towards mutual respect and consideration. How much more difficult to bring together into teamwork and fair play 22 youngsters from different countries and different backgrounds, who, as often as not, do not understand each other's language.

Sometimes scenes of confusion cannot be avoided in our country with its rapid absorption of immigrants and on the field it happens that the referee himself becomes the 23d factor of misunderstanding and tumult. . .

ISRAELI TEACHERS and trainers have educated new generations to become the pride of their nation, and we are sure that this tradition will continue and become rooted in all spheres of life, including sports, in our new-old country.

Considers Sneer At Helen Cohen Unbecoming Rabbi

• Editor Jewish POST and OPINION

I am at a loss to understand why you should waste 22 precious lines on an ill-humored and indelicate gibe such as appeared in your issue of Apr. 3, over the signature of Rabbi Simon Dolgin.

His printed sneer at your columnist Helen Cohen I do not consider as "freedom of the press," but as intemperance of a truant pen.

It is unworthy of space in your respected paper, grossly discourteous to a truehearted and keen-witted woman contributing to your weekly despite her heavy load of motherhood, and unbecoming a rabbi who for all his admitted want of "moving spirit" should be impelled at least to remember from his training days that according to Jewish ethics deriding a person in public is tantamount to bloodshed.

Conceding that Mrs. Cohen who like thousands of lay-writers must rely on manifold sources for information, occasionally errs from the traditional point of view, why doesn't the learned rabbi meet her on the solid ground of facts and evidence instead of indulging in caustic flippancies. Which after all is a rabbi's mission, to taunt —or to teach?

To paraphrase Rabbi Dolgin: For those who shy away from the issue, wisecracks and twits will alway fill the bill.

Says Orthodox Can't Tell Her She's Not a Jew

• Editor Jewish POST and OPINION:

In the Mar. 13 edition of The National Jewish POST and OPINION, there appear two letters from Orthodox Jews in reference to Dr. Maurice N. Eisendrath's article (P-O Feb. 20).

Let me state that I am not writing in defense of or against Dr. Eisendrath's article. As a Jew I am concerned with a far more serious problem: One Jew telling another Jew that he may or may not call himself a Jew.

I am fairly fed up with all the pious, hypocritical, intolerant Orthodox Jews. You know the ones I mean; they keep seperate dishes—one set for dairy, one set for meat—oh, yes, and one set for when they have barbeque in the back yard.

Just who are these men that tell me that I cannot call myself a Jew! . . .

I say we are all Jews—Orthodox, Conservative or Reform—our roads may be different, but our destination is the same.

CALLS MEMBERS 'MESHUMADIM'

Council for Judaism Provokes Him to Help Israel Even More

• Editor, Jewish POST and OPINION:

With reference to the letter in "Freedom of the Press" of the Apr. 3 issue entitled "Berger sees Weinstein as Judge of Rabbinate," it sems to me a pity that when an apparent malignancy (Berger) attacks a healthy organism (Weinstein) the condition calls for us to set up a protective resistance against this type of insidious warfare. I have held my peace, not seeking any trouble with this so-called "Council for Judaism;" however, I must speak out against the doctrines as purported by Berger and Singer . . .

HOW CAN meshumadim [apostates] such as those representing the "Council" apparently attempt to besmirch the intelligent representations of Rabbi Weinstein? These meshumadim apparently are well paid hirelings who appear to represent the monied interests of a group who have the hutzpa to call themselves Jews, and who obviously are aware that loyalty to our faith and our heritage means that they must be TOTAL JEWS, and therefore the "Council" members send a "mouthpiece" to utter vituperatives against the greatest elements of our faith, namely honoring a dedicated rabbi and giving of tzedaka.

I fell that the most vigorous response to these negative professionals in our midst should consist of unfaltering devotion, and even greater giving of our monetary substance for the emergency that we ALL know to be at hand. I, for one, shall double my contribution to the Combined Jewish Appeal, and I prav that there are many more among our people who will do their utmost in this hour of need.

I FEEL certain that if more Total Jews were to speak out against the carefully couched nomenclature, as represented by the Council, the internal destruction of our total strength as Jews will be deterred. . . .

Hollywood Director Is Held By Israel

TEL AVIV (P-O)—Sam Zebba, a Hollywood director who came here to film the short featuring Edward G. Robinson, may be in trouble.

Zebba, a former Israeli who became a U.S. citizen, is being held for evading conscription in Israel.

When the director reached Israel by plane with Robinson, his name was noted by authorities on the list of Israelis living abroad who had not presented themselves for army services. He was released on his personal bond of 500 pounds.

ZEBBA served with the Jewish Legion in World War II.

Both Zebba and Robinson donated their services to the Israel bond organization under whose auspices the film is being made.
